Hi Melissa,

If I'm reading this correctly, MDE's standard approach for TMDL development is consistent with the approach we are devising here for trash. That is good news.

I'm sorry if you were caught off guard about the endpoint document. It was our understanding that the jurisdictions wanted EPA to take a first cut at the endpoint approach. If that is not the preference, you are more than welcome to draft something instead. Prior to EPA sending something to the jurisdictions, we need to get it cleared through our management (including HQs), which is why you have not seen it. We would plan to share the document as soon as possible and are openly seeking feedback from MDE and DOEE. Please let us know how you would like to proceed here.

Also, I am attaching the meeting notes from our call on May 8th. Please let me know if there are any comments/questions on this.

Thanks,
Micka

All:

I'd like to follow up on the conference call we had on May 8, 2019. In the past Maryland has had informal meetings to discuss ideas/documents with stakeholders and that information has been included in the administrative record. These were advertised to interested stakeholders through our website and mailings. The formal public comment period would start with a public comment period on the 'public draft' version of the documentation with a comment response document to follow and the whole documentation submitted to EPA. This is standard operating procedure for Maryland and we do not have a problem following this same approach. I understand from the call that MWCOG is being made aware of the potential for a public meeting to present the endpoint document.

On a different topic, I was surprised to learn that an endpoint document has already been drafted and is under review at EPA-HQ. What is in this document and have we seen it already? It sounded like something new so I'm not sure of its contents. We'd like to review it as soon as it is available, if indeed it is something that we haven't seen already.
